The figure shows that a statistically significantly lower proportion of younger respondents (aged under 65 years) with a long-term health condition or disability agreed or strongly agreed they are able to have enough say in the actions of central and local government agencies in 2022 compared to those without a long-term health condition or disability (15% and 23% respectively). The proportion of older respondents (65 years and above) with a long-term health condition or disability agreeing or strongly agreeing (18%) was not significantly different from those without a health condition or disability.
